NEW WEBSITE FEATURING FREE HEALTH CLINICS LAUNCHED FOR NATIONAL MEN'S HEALTH WEEK

Web Site Provides Many Options to People in Need of Quality Affordable Healthcare

Washington, D.C., June 9, 2005 – Men's Health Network (MHN) has established a Web site that identifies free and low-cost health care for men and their families. Recognizing that health care access is a major issue for many Americans, the Web site includes links to prescription drug assistance programs, including the Together Rx Access Card, Pfizer Connection to Care and Friends, Partnership for Prescription Assistance, Medicare links and information on clinical trials.

"According to U.S. Census Bureau data, men are significantly less likely to have health insurance than women," said Scott Williams, Marketing Manager for the Men's Health Network. "This Web site is a needed resource that will provide men and their families with vital information so they can take better care of their health."

National Men's Health Week (June 13-19th) gives health care providers, the media, and individuals an opportunity to encourage men and boys to seek regular medical advice and early treatment for disease and injury. The response has been overwhelming with hundreds of awareness activities nationwide, including the launch of www.healthclinicsonline.com. People who log onto the Web site will get a directory of approximately 4,000 free clinics as well as access to free or low-cost programs and services that are available in all 50 states. MHN encourages health care entities to link to this site so that individuals with limited access to health care can identify locations that may offer affordable or free health services.
