
Introduction

Knowledge is of two kinds. We know a subject ourselves, or we know where we can find the information.

~Samuel Johnson~

The Resource Directory for Older People is designed to help people find the information they need. A cooperative effort of the National Institute on Aging (NIA) and the Administration on Aging (AoA), the directory is intended to serve a wide audience including health and legal professionals, social service providers, librarians, and researchers, as well as older people and their families. The directory contains organizational names, addresses, phone numbers, and fax numbers, as well as email and website addresses.

The directory lists Federal agencies, AoA-supported resource centers, professional societies, private groups, and volunteer programs. Some deal mainly with older people and their families while others serve professionals who work with older adults and still others target people of all ages. Inclusion in the directory does not imply an endorsement by NIA or AoA.

The directory is arranged alphabetically by organization name, and there is a general subject index. Every effort was made to publish a brief but accurate overview about each listed organization. Readers should contact each organization directly if they want more detailed information.

We welcome comments, suggestions, and additions for future editions. Updates, as well as information on any national group serving older people that is not included in this edition, should be sent to:

Did You Know?

Not all consumer health information on the web is of equal quality. To decide if a website is accurate and reliable, you might ask:

- Is the original source for the information clear? Is there a review date?
- Is the medical information reviewed by an advisory board? Are their names and affiliations clearly noted?
- Is your confidentiality assured? If you have to register, do you know how your personal information will be used?
- Does it sound too good to be true? Scientific studies rarely use words like "breakthrough", "secret ingredient" or "miracle cure."
- Is the information promotional? Are advertisements separated from content?
